

Smithsonian

UTAH HUMANITIES
Ideas in Action

NS UNITE
LINKING OUR PAST TO OUR FUTURE

For Immediate Release

Media Contact: Deena Pyle | Utah Humanities Communications Director | 801.201.4300

Smithsonian Exhibition, Crossroads: Change in Rural America Explores Future and Sustainability of Rural Communities

August 29, 2023 – As part of Crossroads, a statewide exploration of life and change in rural Utah presented by Utah Humanities and its partners, North Summit Unite with the Summit County History Department announce a collaboration with Utah Humanities to bring Crossroads, a Museum on Main Street (MoMS) exhibition from the Smithsonian Institution on a tour through Utah.

Utah Humanities is touring Crossroads: Change in Rural America to eight Utah communities from September 2023 to December 2024. Community organizations will partner with Utah Humanities to host the exhibition and connect their local stories through companion exhibits and programming.

The Smithsonian's Crossroads is a traveling exhibition that provokes fresh thinking and sparks conversations about the future and sustainability of rural communities. Crossroads offers small towns a chance to look at their own paths over the past century – to highlight the changes that affected their fortunes, explore how they have adapted, and think about what's next.

The grand opening of the statewide tour takes place in Coalville. Join North Summit Unite, Summit County, and Utah Humanities to open Crossroads: Change in Rural America and welcome the Smithsonian to Utah.

CROSSROADS: Change in Rural America*
Utah Exhibition Tour Grand Opening
September 16th, 2023 at 10:00 am
Ledges Event Center, 202 Park Road, Coalville, Utah 84017

Crossroads* will enjoy a stay in Coalville at the Ledges Event Center from September 16th to October 28th, 2023.

Details on Crossroads in Coalville are available at North Summit Unite and Utah Humanities, and in this event document.

Lynn Wood, Project Director at North Summit Unite says "We feel incredibly fortunate to have been given the opportunity of hosting the Crossroads exhibit in our small town. The resources and expertise we have received from partner organizations near and far have helped us grow tremendously as a nonprofit. The end result will be a rich and rewarding experience for our community and exhibit visitors with a long-lasting impact on our future."

Megan van Frank, Director of the Center for Community Heritage at Utah Humanities, is coordinating the exhibition tour in Utah. In explaining the role Utah Humanities plays in bringing the Smithsonian to Utah, she says, "We are proud to bring the Crossroads exhibition to eight communities around the state in 2023-2024. This collaboration among national, state, and community organizations strengthens Utah's cultural community and helps preserve and share Utah history. We work closely with host sites to leverage the national exhibition to bring focus to their own experiences and bring context to an understanding of rural identity, land, and community." Van Frank hopes that "visitors to the Crossroads exhibition will come away with an appreciation for the tension between cherished ideals and challenging realities of life in rural Utah. The exhibition and each local project is an opportunity for Utahns to explore change and adaptation in rural America and Utah as part of local, state, and national conversations."

Professor Greg Smoak of the University of Utah is the consulting scholar for the Utah tour of the Crossroads exhibition. He says, "Utah is an urban place with a rural heart. The vast majority of our state's population lives in the densely populated cities of the Wasatch Front. Yet, if pressed, many of those urban dwellers might hesitate to think of themselves as city folk. That is because rural life holds deep and resilient meanings for many Americans, especially here in Utah. Contemporary pressures that drive change may seem daunting, yet adaptation has always been core to rural life in Utah. The changes and challenges facing small communities today are not unprecedented, and considering the ways Utahns have navigated decision points in the past might help us think about the future of rural Utah."

Terri Cobb, Registrar at Museum on Main Street, Smithsonian Institution Traveling Exhibition Service / Smithsonian Affiliations remarks that "Crossroads: Change in Rural America is part of the Smithsonian's Museum on Main Street program, a unique collaboration between the Smithsonian Institution Traveling Exhibition Service (SITES), state humanities councils, and local host institutions. We are proud to be partnering with Utah Humanities to bring Crossroads to eight communities across Utah throughout the next year. Crossroads takes a broad look at the characteristics of rural America. It explores how an attraction to and interaction with the land formed the basis of rural America and how rural communities and small towns evolve. It also highlights how change has transformed rural America and how rural Americans are evolving for the future."

To learn more about the statewide tour, contact Utah Humanities at 801.359.9670 or visit the Utah Humanities website.

Crossroads: Change in Rural America is part of Museum on Main Street, a collaboration between the Smithsonian Institution, Utah Humanities, and North Summit Unite with Summit County History Department.

###